PINK BREECHES FOR MEN DREAM OF GAY TAILOR

(Correspondence of Associated Press)

LONDON, Oct. 6.—A man garbed in a black frock coat, a ruff, a pair of pink breeches and bright colored stockings very likely would evoke astonishment if not ridicule were he to stroll down Fifth avenue or Broadway, but Henry Parkes, hailed in London as "the hidden hand in men's fashions," declares such restoration of color and line to men's dress should be a logical and altogether proper aftermath to the war. He is seeking to revolutionize men's dress to popularize the "gallant" styles of bygone days. His creed is that men want to cast off their dark, unsymmetrical garments of gloom and wear clothes of bright hue and brilliant cut expressive of a new age of heroism and romance.

Volunteers—Wanted, 1000 sportsmen of good social position to wear, upon a given date, new fashions for men designed to bring back color and life into masculine attire.

This was the gist of a request the apostle of the new era of "romantic dress" sought to have inserted in London papers. To convince newspaper representatives of his sincerity, Mr. Parkes exhibited fifteen samples of his earlier costumes.

"These clothes," said the revolutionist in fashions, indicating a pearl gray evening dress with lace ruffles, "are not effeminate can you call the age of Shortland and Oberlin and Walter Raleigh effeminate? It was a gallant age—and so is this. The end of every war heralds a new age. The smartness of army regalia has worked a sort of dress revolution for men. They see how much finer they look with swords and breeches, the girls like them better, they feel braver, more upright."

The "call for volunteers" was printed, but the last communique from Mr. Parkes' establishment, which is to serve as headquarters during the proposed offensive on current men's fashions, was to the effect that the desired "war strength" of 1,000 had not yet been recruited.

AMUSEMENTS

MAY ALLISON IN CLEVER STORY TODAY.

The offering at the Butler today is "The Uplifters," a comedy drama in which May Allison is starred, and which is adapted from the story published in the Saturday Evening Post, which is sufficient to put the stamp of approval on any production.

The clever story tells of Hortense Trout's venture into the land of Bohemia and of her thorough disillusionment of its much vaunted allure. Listening to the lurid talk directed against society and capital by a red-hot woman socialist, she begins to think that she, too, is one of the down-trodden. She gives up her position as stenographer and seeks the lady of oratory who sympathizes with her and persuades her to join the "unshackled free." Hortense accepts, but soon finds that she has only exchanged one kind of drudgery for another and that being called "comrade" by a lot of long-haired men and short-haired women does not compensate for everything the unpleasant people expect her to do. The comedy is exceptionally amusing and is filled with unusual and unexpected situations.

Added to the feature will be a two-reel comedy, entitled "Roof Garden Roughhouse." Tomorrow, Pauline Frederick, in "Out of the Shadow." Monday, the best yet, "Checkers," the greatest race track drama ever screened.

MRS. HUGH DONOVAN DIES.
Mrs. Hugh Donovan, wife of Hugh Donovan of the Standard Oil company, died in Goldfield Thursday morning. Services were held at 4:30 yesterday at Sacred Heart church and the remains will be sent to Sacramento for burial. Mrs. Donovan gave birth to a child three weeks ago. Mrs. Scannell, a sister of Mr. Donovan, from Sacramento, was in attendance.

Palibearers for the funeral were Anthony Carolan, Dan McPee, Pat McAuliffe, James Kelly, John Clarko and J. McKenzie.

MEXICAN GIRLS ACT AS CENSORS ON THE MOVIES

(Correspondence of Associated Press)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15.—Two young Mexican women have been placed in control of the censorship and development of motion picture films in Mexico. They are Miss Adriana S. Ehlers, who will act as chief censor and Miss Dolores L. Ehlers, who will have charge of the work of producing Mexican films to be distributed in the United States, Europe and Latin-American countries. The purpose of this widespread distribution of the Mexican films is announced to be to clear away many of the misunderstandings that are said to exist regarding Mexico.

Films showing the life and industries of Mexico are being prepared under the direction of Miss Dolores L. Ehlers who has a staff making pictures in different parts of the republic. These are to be distributed by co-operation of the United States bureau of commercial economies in virtually every country in the western hemisphere. Censorship is to be vigorous. All undesirable films such as gruesome murders and immoral pictures now widely shown and patronized by the poorer people, are to be barred from the public by Miss Adriana S. Ehlers. The smuggling of films across the American border is to be stopped. As eighty-five per cent of the population in Mexico is illiterate, films have been adopted as the only means of educating people who cannot read or write.

The Misses Ehlers were appointed by President Carranza through means of a motion picture scholarship and sent three years ago to the United States to study the possibilities of the motion picture business from a national standpoint.

WINTER FOOD FOR ISLANDERS

(Correspondence of Associated Press)
SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 30. By mail. The ten hundred souls in the Kuskokwim district of Alaska, who each winter have wondered whether or not they would be found alive and in good health when the sun came again to warm the tundra, will not suffer for want of food this year.

Difficult to reach at best because of early ice and rough waters, this Kuskokwim district has furnished a problem for transportation companies from Seattle, on whose efforts depended the life of the district's winter toilers. But this year a new and large power schooner, the Ozma, safely reached Bethel with two cargoes of supplies for miners and traders of the Kuskokwim valley and fish packets near the mouth of the river.

Every time a man goes down town to buy anything these days, he's mad even before he asks the price.

VICTIM OF ACCIDENT REMAINS UNCONSCIOUS

John Hagel, who is suffering from concussion of the brain as a result of being knocked down by an automobile in Goldfield, remained unconscious yesterday, and, according to Dr. J. L. McCarthy, his chances for recovery are small.

Some people play at their work and then work at their play and do neither one well.
